Riverbank survey volunteer

We're a small Trust with a big patch and we would love to know more about how we can make it a better place for people and wildlife.

Riverbank survey volunteers share opportunities for improvements they spot whilst walking the riverbank. Whether its a stretch of footpath that needs some care or an opportunity to improve habitat for fish this is a way to share your passion and knowledge about the river. You could identify opportunities for our regular volunteer days or bigger projects for future funding bids.

This role is ideal for people who have some knowledge of rivers and their surroundings. You could already be an existing conservation volunteer, a keen walker or an angler.

We can provide one-too-one training (if needed) and mentoring. We will anticipate that many people will walk their local stretches but will also pay volunteer travel expenses. We are particularly keen for someone to walk all the Discovering the Natural Aire walks to plan waymarking for them.
